

FAMILY COURT OUTCOMES

If we could ever get an objective study of the outcomes of the Family Court cases 10 YEARS after they began it would look something like this:

4% father with sole custody and mother still fighting for very isolated access say once every 3 months or not at all

(children with severe psychological damage from Family Court lasting 10 years)

1 % father with sole custody and mother every second weekend access

(some psychological damage to children from Family Court lasting 3 years)

1 % joint custody

(children with some psychological damage from Family Court lasting 3 years)

90 % mother with sole custody and father still fighting for very isolated access say once every 3 months or not at all

(most children with severe psychological damage from Family Court lasting 10 years)

4 % mother with sole custody father has every second weekend access

(most children with severe psychological damage from Family Court 3 lasting years)

Most non-residential parents would give up long before this losing all contact with their children.

The impact on teenager and older children suicide rates of sole parenthood is to double it. These children have significantly increased incidence of other mortality events. Maybe 2 % of these children would have died.

The effect of the psychological damage has LIFETIME impacts on children's health see the studies on Adverse Childhood Experiences.

Maybe 10 % of these fathers would have committed suicide leaving their child without a dad. Maybe 5 % of fathers died from other increased mortality events such as heart attack.

Maybe 30 % of these fathers have no chance of every having a relationship with their children because the children believe the false memories planted into their minds about violence and sexual abuse that never happened.

Maybe 10 % of these fathers spend time in prison for breaches of restraining orders or actually committing violent offences because they are so traumatised by what has happened.

Maybe 95 % of these fathers are ruined financially for life so they cannot help their children later in life like they would like to.

The damage to mothers and other family members is also extremely significant. If you objectively weighed up the likely outcomes, Family Court is just not worth it. All it leads to is death and misery for children, parents and lots of other people.

For more information see:

<http://www.paaa.support/damage-to-children.html>

M Derry 28 November 2017